My new book The Bend of the Road ~ Tiding Westward is out and now on retailer sites, like Barnes and Noble and, of course, omnipresent Amazon. The second in the Heritage Saga series, this time the journey begins in 1634 in a remote corner what is now modern Germany. Five years since the earlier volume The Way Back Home ~ Finding Rose was released. Traveling, an almost two year old grandson in London, working two half days a week when in town and a yard that feels much bigger than it did 35 years ago seems to have slowed down the process.

Attached is an image of the front cover that you are welcome to add to the newsletter if there's room and inclination. The ebook version should be out a bit later, probably in about two or three weeks.

Thanks again for keeping us informed.

Recently, a song I heard brought up a nice memory. Once in a while, I used to take this Old Beast up for a solo flight. I'd usually practice touch-and-go's at a beautiful grass field near Fairhope, Alabama. I'd fall into a zen-like state, brought on by the beauty that surrounded me and the peace of solo flight. I was young and happy. I had the world by the tail! Here's the song I sang, as that Primitive, Old Bird and I flew along.
